

2016 Urban Housing Forum: Room for Growth

Monday, April 25, 2016 | 415 Westlake | 415 Westlake Avenue N

 all sessions/speakers subject to change*

The Urban Housing Forum will examine how housing design and policy can serve as catalysts for livability and quality of place in an increasingly dense city. This full-day program will include presentations on innovative projects across scales and typologies; an exploration of new regulatory and development strategies; and an investigation into housing's unique and significant role in shaping individual lives, creating a sense of community, and the overall design of the city. During the forum we will explore what it will take for Seattle to become a model for balancing growth and density to create a livable city for all.
